

6. Conclusion

By applying this matrix equation, we can estimate the coefficients of a multiple linear regression model for any set of input data, including any number of predictors. This matrix solution is highly efficient for large datasets and can be computed using standard numerical methods in most statistical software or programming languages like Python (with libraries such as NumPy or Scikit-learn).